Company registration number:	Cg. 07-09-024852

6.1. Data security

The data controller shall retain the following during data processing:

- integrity and confidentiality: protecting the information so that it may only be accessed by eligible persons, protecting the correctness and fullness of the method of processing;
- availability: ensuring that, when required, the entitled user may access the desired information and the required devices are available.

Electronic messages forwarded via the internet are vulnerable regardless of the protocol (e-mail, web, ftp, etc.) to network threats that lead to fraudulent activities, disputes regarding the contract or the disclosure or modification of information. The service provider takes all precautionary measures to protect against such threats. The service provider monitors the systems in order to record all security deviations and provide evidence for all security events. In addition, system monitoring enables checking the efficiency of the applied precautionary measures.

6.2. Data storage

The data controller selects and operates its software and IT devices so that the processed data: - are available for the entitled persons (availability), - their authenticity and authentication is ensured (authenticity of data processing), - their integrity can be proven (data integrity), - are protected against unlawful access (data confidentiality).

The data controller ensures the protection of the security of data processing through technical and organizational measures that provide sufficient level of protection against risks (that arise) during data processing.

7. DATA TRANSFER

The data controller transfers the personal data necessary for ordering and the execution of the order to the sales and/or service provider partners based on legal opportunity.

8. POSSIBLE LEGAL REMEDIES

8.1. Information

The involved person may request information at any time about the processing of their personal data, the actual execution of data processing, their rights and guarantees, especially the person in charge of data control and data processing, the legal basis for data processing, its purpose, timely scope, the place of data storage and the data security measures.

For the request of the involved person, the data controller provides information about the activities related to data processing as well as data transfer.

The data controller shall provide the information in a clear manner in writing within a reasonably short time after the submission of the request, but within 30 days at the latest.

The information provision is free of charge if the requester has not submitted any information requests to the data controller for the same activity, data scope in the same year.

Otherwise the data controller defines a fee and provides the information after the payment of the fee.

8.2. Deletion

The data controller deletes the personal data if its processing is unlawful, if it is requested by the involved person, if the purpose of data processing has ceased to exist, if the legally defined deadline for data storage has expired, or if it has been ordered by court or the data protection authority.

The data controller shall inform the involved person and persons to whom the data has been previously transferred for the purpose of data processing about the correction or deletion of data. The notification can be omitted if it does not violate the legitimate interest of the involved person with regard to the purpose of data processing.

In addition, the involved person may request the correction or deletion of their personal data in the manner specified upon registration as well as through the customer service. The only possible obstacle to deletion shall be a legal limitation.

8.3. Protest

The involved person may protest against the processing of their personal data if

- the processing (transfer) of personal data is exclusively necessary for the enforcement of the rights or legitimate interest of the data controller or data receiver, except if the data processing is required by law;

- the use or transfer of the personal data is carried out for the purpose of direct marketing purposes, polling or scientific research;
- practising the right to protest is otherwise enabled by law.
The data controller - while simultaneously suspending the processing of data - reviews the protest within the shortest possible time following the submission of the request, but within up to 15 days, and notifies the requester in writing of the result.

If the protest is justified, the data controller shall discontinue data processing – including any further data recording and data transfer –, shall lock the data, and shall notify everyone to whom the personal data involved in the protest have been transferred of the protest and the measures taken, who shall take action in order to enforce the right to protest.

If the involved person does not agree with the decision made by the data controller, they may appeal to court within 30 days following the communication thereof. The data controller shall not delete the data of the involved person if data processing is required by law. However, the data cannot be transferred to the data recipient if the data controller agreed with the protest or the court has found that the protest is legitimate.

8.4. Administrative, judicial remedies

Complaints can be made and proceedings can be initiated against the activity of the data controller:
